

The architecture of these interviews' foundations lay in the telling of a few tales. The honest response to inquiry, an angel inquisition if you will. We are rewarded with a better understanding of beauty and the souls of these precious angels who possess it. From your sexy girl-next-door to your refined and sophisticated beauty, stories of encouragement and words of wisdom build upon each other until we have a metaphysical metropolis of ideology and gorgeous philosophy. This 'metaphysical metropolis' would be policed by angels like Michelle Eastman whose beauty helps shape the world we live in and lends to an atmosphere of heaven on earth which is all we strive for in Angels Playpen.

Beauty is said to induce feelings of 'satisfaction' in others and it's a combination of inner attractiveness and outer pleasantness that gives this impression; the very nature of an angel. "An angel is a person who makes a difference in someone's life. It can be the simplest thing with a smile, saying hello, or unselfishly helping someone in need." It's these simple actions that bring light into the world, especially at the delicate hands of an angel. Quoting Sophia Loren, our current angel states, "Beauty is how you feel inside and it reflects in your eyes. It is not something physical." Michelle Eastman is this statement personified; she embodies the essence of these combined words.

The symbiosis between culture and beauty alters our understanding of beauty; testing it, expanding it. "My parents were born and raised in Germany," Michelle says of her own lineage. "They came to the United States thirty years ago. Most of my extended family resides in Germany so I visit yearly." She herself was born and raised in the city of angels; Los Angeles, California. "I currently live in New York," she counters. Living in New York has its pleasures. "I live in New York, what's not to like about fashion central." And shopping just happens to be one of her vices with H&M topping her favorite's list.

Michelle other vices include traveling, dancing, hanging out and enjoying great times with close friends. “I don’t party too hard,” she says, “if I do I usually have friends over or we all agree on a club to go to unless there is a special event.” When it comes to dining, Michelle has a pretty open palate. “I am not picky when it comes to eating but I do love Sushi more than anything.” If it’s just a quick getaway to unwind, an offer few would refuse and one which I love to extend to our angels for all their hard work and dedication, Michelle has her mind made up. “I would love to go to Fiji,” she tells me, her words pregnant with a bit of excitement. “So please offer me a free weekend getaway.” I believe I shall. How does one deny an angel?
